

Is your practitioner registered?

Your benefit plan with Pacific Blue Cross includes coverage for select practitioner services*

For your treatments to be covered, your practitioner has to be registered with the appropriate college or association in the province where the service takes place.

For your claim to be approved, you must include your practitioner's registration number when submitting your claim.

Here's how to find out if your practitioner is registered

Ask your practitioner

- What college or association are they registered with?
- What is their registration number?

The practitioner's registration number will also be printed on the invoice. If you are unsure about where the registration number is on your invoice, ask your practitioner. Remember, you will need the registration number when submitting your claim.

Research your practitioner online
